OFFICE OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

Tuesday - 25 August 1964

1. [REDACTED] Emily Davis in Congressman Ogden Reid's office telephoned saying she had received a call from the Congressman from London and would be in touch with him later in the day. He was concerned with some additional information on the Vietnam situation. Unclassified information was furnished Miss Davis. 50X1
2. [REDACTED] Miss Kogut in the office of Congressman J. Irving Whalley (Pa.) telephoned saying a constituent, one [REDACTED] had made application to the Agency for employment and had recently received a letter from the Agency saying there was nothing available for him. [REDACTED] had written the Congressman as he was afraid he may have been turned down for security reasons. After checking with Personnel, Miss Kogut was informed that [REDACTED] had been sent a letter telling him there was nothing available for him with the Agency in the particular line in which he was interested. 50X1

3. [REDACTED] John Newhouse, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, returned my call of yesterday and indicated that Mr. Lee, Acting Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, had been in touch with him about the "Matthias report." I learned later in talking with Mr. Lee that he had made ten copies of the report available to the Foreign Relations Committee and to the Foreign Affairs Committee where senators and representatives could have access to it. Newhouse asked if I knew how this document got in the hands of the CHICAGO TRIBUNE. I told him I did not but the matter was being looked into. 50X1
4. [REDACTED] Leon Herman, Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, called requesting a copy of the "Matthias report." He was referred to Mr. Lee's office at State. 50X1
5. [REDACTED] Herbert Beaser, in the office of Senator Ernest Gruening, called requesting a copy of the "Matthias report." He was referred to Mr. Lee's office at State. 50X1

8. [redacted] James Gehrig, in the office of Senator Stuart Symington, called and asked if we could assist him in obtaining a copy of the "Matthias report." It was suggested that the quickest and easiest way for him to have access to a copy would be by his contacting the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.
